

Independent Studies

Ohio State Mansfield faculty may arrange independent studies with students at the student's request. It is up to the instructor whether or not to accept such requests. Ordinarily, teaching of independent studies is not compensated and is not considered part of the normal teaching load.

If you agree to an independent study, you must:

1. Obtain departmental permission to teach it if such permission is required by your department.
2. Fill out the Independent Study Permission Form and submit it to the Associate Dean.
3. Be sure that the student fulfills the prerequisites for the course. Each department differs in its requirements. See the department's course listing for details.

Document revised March 17, 2016

The current version of this document is maintained by the Associate Dean.